Course Support from the Emory Libraries

Materials and Resources for Spring 2022
Sarah Morris | Emory Libraries
Alicia Lane | CFDE
Return to Remote Instruction

Resources for January 2022
Places to go for updates

Woodruff Library blog on support for remote instruction - https://scholarblogs.emory.edu/woodruff/news/remote-alternatives-for-spring-2022-course-support

Contact your subject librarian directly with questions and be on the lookout for communication from your school’s library -
https://libraries.emory.edu/contact/subject-librarian-directory.html
Considerations for Spring 2022

(Per the Emory Libraries Blog) - Since the move to online classes for Spring 2022 was unexpected, if you have students who do not have their books the first week of class, you can upload in course reserves a scan of the readings for the first week. Also, the Libraries will manage and pay for any permissions required for readings placed in course reserves.

Keep an eye out for updates and news from the libraries as we continue to adapt to the developing situation with Omicron and COVID more generally.
Know where to go for information and resources
You can work with the course reserves team at your library to make materials available to students on your Canvas course site.

Course reserves overview and contact information - https://libraries.emory.edu/using-the-library/course-reserves.html

Course reserves for instructors - https://libraries.emory.edu/using-the-library/course-reserves-for-instructors.html

Feel free to contact your course reserves team directly with questions and to get help with making your materials available to students.
Locating and Requesting Materials

You can work with your subject librarian, course reserves team, and others at your library to find locate and obtain different kinds of material for your course.

E-books -
https://guides.libraries.emory.edu/main/ebooks

Streaming video -
https://libraries.emory.edu/materials/film-videos/index.html

Open access materials -
https://sco.library.emory.edu/oer/index.html

Purchase requests for both electronic and physical materials -
https://libraries.emory.edu/services/request-purchase.html
Library Research Guides

You can request a library research guide for your course, or share an existing guide with your students - https://guides.libraries.emory.edu/?group_id=20355

You can also work with your subject librarian to have a library research guide embedded in your Canvas site.
Library Instruction

Learn more about our variety of library instruction services, including in-person and virtual support for courses - https://libraries.emory.edu/instructors/index.html

See ideas for integrating library resources and information literacy into your course - https://cfde.emory.edu/toolkit/index.html
Questions?

Get in touch with the libraries at https://emory.libanswers.com/
Submitted questions

Is there a way to see restrictions on availability for online texts? For instance, some e-books only allow 3 people to view it at a time. - Some of our e-book vendors will display that information when you access the title, but others do not make it obvious unfortunately! We are launching a new library search system for our catalog, so we can pass this feedback on to see if this is information that we can make more easily available to patrons. Thanks for the input!

When scanning something for reserves, how much can be uploaded in terms of copyright or what is the cost of scanning something? -- You can connect with course reserves directly about these questions since the answers can vary depending on what you are trying to make available in course reserves. We have copyright specialists who can help navigate those concerns and our course reserves teams can breakdown cost considerations for an item in question.